A YOUNG man from Rhynie has distinguished himself as a student at North East Scotland College in Aberdeen.

Murray Lyne, 20, a former pupil of the village's primary school and The Gordon Schools received the Outstanding Achievement Award for 2016.

The award recognised the hard work and commitment made to his HND computing software development course and also his support of other students.

As part of his course, Murray worked with primary pupils from Aberdeen schools. He was also given recognition as someone who has inspired and impressed his peers and lecturers.

Murray has now completed the two-year college course and in September will move to Robert Gordon University to study for a degree.

Award-winning student Murray Lyne and lecturer Pam Cumming.
