

Awards success for stockbroker firm

HUNTLY stockbroker Redmayne-Bentley won a prize at the Investors Chronicle and Financial Times Awards 2015 for the second year running.

The stockbroking and investment management organisation was named Best Full Service Stockbroker, after readers of the Investors Chronicle and Financial Times voted for it to receive the finance industry accolade.

The awards, announced at a ceremony at the Plaisterers' Hall, London, reward the best stockbrokers, products and financial service providers for their customer service.

Emma Plumpton, manager of the Grampian branch on Gordon Street, said: "I wholeheartedly thank all those who voted for us.

"We are very proud to be a traditional stockbroker and we strive to provide a full range of services with a firm emphasis on personal service and personal contact. We are therefore very honoured that our stockbroking service has been recognised in this way."

This latest award makes it a treble for Redmayne-Bentley this year. They have also been named Best Advisory

It has been a special year for Redmayne-Bentley which earlier this month celebrated 140 years since its foundation in 1875. In October, the firm marked 50 years since the merger of Redmayne & Co with two other firms to become Redmayne-Bentley as it is today.
